

Peer Review File

Article information: <https://dx.doi.org/10.21037/apc-23-17>

Reviewer A

This is basically a review of review papers, which just touched surface of complex nature of lncRNA associated with pancreatic cancer. There are strangely numerous redundant descriptions.

Reviewer B

The literature on diagnostic significance of lncRNAs and prognosis significance of lncRNAs has been well and comprehensively organized. I think it will be a good reference for researchers conducting ncRNA research in pancreatic cancer.

Reviewer C

This review is interesting, provides valuable insights into the topic and potentially benefit pancreatic cancer patients. The structure of the manuscript is well organized and particular issues are well and clearly described. I draw attention to the valuable tables, which required a lot of work and summarize the most important information very well. Alternatively, a figure showing the classification of non-coding RNAs would enrich the paper and make easier to understand. The quality of English language is appropriate. I thoroughly enjoyed reading this review.