11. Interviews with Outstanding Authors (2023)

In 2023, many JHMHP authors make outstanding contributions to our journal. Their articles published with us have received very well feedback in the field and stimulate a lot of discussions and new insights among the peers.

Hereby, we would like to highlight some of our outstanding authors who have been making immense efforts in their research fields, with a brief interview of their unique perspective and insightful view as authors.

Dr. Linda Collins (PhD) is a registered nurse by profession with years of experience working within the National Health Service (NHS) in the United Kingdom. She dedicated 10 years of her nursing career to clinical research, concentrating on the diagnosis and management of chronic urinary tract infections and lower urinary tract symptoms at University College London (UCL) and Whittington Health. Her academic career progressed when she was appointed Associate Professor of Nursing at Kingston University in London before being appointed as Associate Professor and Graduate Coordinator for Population Health Management at Southeastern Louisiana University. Her continued area of interest is management of chronic diseases, as she continues to explore health concepts that lead to maximizing positive health outcomes, the significance of integrated and collaborative healthcare and the intricacies of population health management for individuals living with a long-term chronic disease.
